Once again, the Government has proven that it doesn't care about the consumer. Just once it would have been nice to have seen the Government actually have some balls and stand up for the rights of the average consumer and citizen rather than be a suck-up to business. I guess money ranks above ethics once again with the sellout and buckling under to Microsoft. I would have thought that this administration was more ethical and principled than it's proving to be. I guess that Clinton set the precedent in making the Justice Department just a rubber-stamp bunch of butt-kissers. It's a shame there are no real Americans left there any more.... There are a bunch of us that are ashamed that you all are handling this case. You are so out of touch with the citizens of the country and what they feel and think that it's pitiful....
